INTELLECTUAL & DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITY AWARENESS MONTH

As many of you know, Arin was born with Microcephaly, an intellectual and developmental disability (IDD) that affects how Arin's brain and head grow. IDDs are surrounded by negative misconceptions and stigmas, but having different abilities means more creativity and adaptability to allow that individual to truly shine.

While Microcephaly affects many areas of Arin's life-her speech, size, balance, and ability to see change in elevation, Arin has many unique talents! If you've met Arin, there is nothing like her bright personality, ability to connect with anyone (and any dog), and her big laugh.

In honor of IDD month, check out the next page to see how Arin adapts to make her dog treats by hand. With an adaptive recipe, hard work, and patience, Arin does not allow the stigmas around her condition define her!

Arin uses a color coded adaptive recipe cookbook to make her treats! By crossing off every ingredient in the cookbook after it goes in the food processor or mixer, Arin makes sure to get just the right amount for your pups.

HAND CUT AND DEHYDRATED

After measuring and mixing all the ingredients, with the help of her support staff, all the dough gets rolled out with a special rolling pin. This rolling pin makes sure all the treats are the same thickness, and Arin can then place the carefully cut dog treats onto the baking tray. Into the oven they go- yum!

That's not it though... part of what makes our treats all natural is that there aren't any preservatives! Next, Arin puts the treats in the oven before bedtime to let the treats dehydrate for 12 hours- an all natural preservative. Treats are best if eaten within the next year, but really who waits that long to eat all their treats anyways.

Hey pups, now it's time to eat up!
